NOTE:

Child care and interpreting will be provided.

How do we effectively teach individuals with Autism Spectrum Disorders (ASD)? Parents, educators, and service providers are constantly bombarded with confusing and sometimes conflicting information about the many autism treatments that are available.

This workshop will provide an in-depth look at various "established" interventions commonly utilized for children with autism as described by the National Autism Center (2009).

This workshop will cover:

- A brief review of the NAC's National Standards Report
- Interventions that demonstrated the most favorable outcomes for children with ASD
- How to apply established autism treatments to your child at home
- How to use data to guide decisions about interventions and treatment choices for your child

Target Audience: Parents, General & Special Education Teachers, Speech/Language Specialists, Psychologists, Instructional Assistants, Site Administrators

LIMITED TO 30 PARTICIPANTS

If you need accommodations for a disability to attend the workshop, please let us know.

*Coffee, Tea &
Water Provided*
